

1. What makes an accessibility issue “High” priority in this project?

A high priority issue is something that makes it hard or impossible for users to access important information or complete tasks.

2. Give one example of an issue that would be “Low” priority and explain why.

A low priority issue could be small design problems like spacing or colors. It’s low because users can still use the website without much trouble.

3. Why is it a problem if everything is marked “High”?

If everything is marked high, you can’t tell what problems are most important. This makes it harder to know what to fix first.
